

Gucci, Intesa Sanpaolo Create Fashion Sustainability Fund for SMEs –

Description

Gucci and Italian bank Intesa Sanpaolo have unveiled the next chapter of a collaboration that, for the first time, will focus on the transition of the supply chain toward sustainable and inclusive practices. The agreement helps companies in the Kering-owned luxury maison's supply chain to embark on a path to improve their social and environmental sustainability through the implementation of specific actions and initiatives that align with the guidelines of the Italian government's National Recovery and Resilience Plan.

Read the full article at: sourcingjournal.com

Category

1. TheCircularEconomy.com

Date Created

July 10, 2021

Author

thecirculareconomyteam

default watermark