

Prince Charles warns of race against time to save our treasured literary collection for the nation | Daily

Description

Priceless manuscripts from some of Britain's greatest poets and authors could be lost to the nation without urgent action, Prince Charles warns today. Writing in the Daily Mail, the heir to the throne said it was 'too awful to contemplate' the loss of handwritten texts by some of the country's best-known writers – including Sir Walter Scott, Robert Burns and Charlotte Bronte. And he warned that the UK is facing a race against time to save a collection of literary treasures from being auctioned off and potentially taken abroad.

Read the full article at: www.dailymail.co.uk

Category

1. TheCircularEconomy.com

Date Created

November 27, 2021

Author

thecirculareconomyteam

default watermark