

The decisive decade for sustainable change

Description

January 2020 marked the dawn of a new decade, but little did we realise what the coming years would bring. The clock is ticking on climate change, but the unexpected impact of COVID-19 suddenly brought all of our priorities into stark relief. With the world on pause, the opportunity to press the re-set button has led to a rapid realignment of our goals and ambitions. From how we operate and do business, to how we implement new low-carbon technologies and moderate our own behaviour, the changes we make over the coming decade will be decisive in more ways than one.
